Never forget: Alabama Holocaust survivors commemorated through art in "Darkness into Life"

By: Andrea Walker – al.com

It's been over 70 years, but Max Steinmetz still vividly remembers the horrors he was subjected to during a very dark era in history, known as the Holocaust. As you listen to his story, you eerily become transported to Poland 1940, standing amongst lines of other persecuted Jews as they were solemnly marched to the "Selection" as Steinmetz recalls. "There was a soldier with a leather whip standing before us. He looked at you and would tell you either to go to the left or the right. I went to the right, my mother, father, and little sister had to go to the left. We found out later that the people who had to go left were sent immediately to the gas chamber to be killed. I never saw my family again."

Max is one of 20 Alabama survivors who bravely tell their story again and again to as many diverse crowds who will listen. They don't falter in their recollections. The memories flow through them as if those horrific events happened only moments ago. "For many survivors there is a compelling drive to tell their story, to bear witness for those that perished," says Ann Mollengarden, Education Director of the Birmingham Holocaust Education Center. "Their testimonies and speaking engagements provide solace that this cataclysmic event that they survived will not be denied or forgotten after they are gone."

It was during a local remembrance event that artists Becky Seitel and Mitzi Levin decided that these stories needed to be preserved through works of art.

The "Darkness Into Life" exhibit profiles the lives of nine Birmingham survivors before, during, and after the Holocaust through photography and original artwork. Each survivor endured their own unique experience, but the exhibit also captures how they rebuilt their life in a new country, and become contributing members to the Birmingham community.

This local connection to Birmingham prompted Vulcan Park & Museum to work alongside the Birmingham Holocaust Education Center to host the exhibit. "Birmingham has a rich cultural history that most locals have no idea about," says Mark Akerman,

Mitzi Levin in front of her painting "Moment of Truth."

Director of Education at Vulcan Park & Museum. "We wanted to partner with the Holocaust Education Center to showcase this exhibit to a broader audience and further help these survivors in telling their stories to this new generation."

"For us, this partnership is huge. We are excited that so many people have an opportunity to see it," agrees Rebecca Dobrinski, Executive Director of the Birmingham Holocaust Education Center.

This complete article can be found on al.com. To learn more about Max's story and those of the other survivors, take a moment to reflect inside the exhibit in the Linn-Henley Gallery at Vulcan Park and Museum. "Darkness Into Life" is open until May 16, 2016.

The performance by The Seasoned Performers will include readings from personal testimonies of Holocaust survivors. Join Vulcan® Park and Museum and friends for an educational and fun walking tour series of Birmingham’s neighborhoods. The series will begin on March 19 with a tour of Parkside. Dungan will lead through Forest Park, identifying styles, materials and proportions that resonate in timeless residences. Registration required at visitvulcan.com.

DETERMINATION, DRAMA, AND DARING: THE LIFE OF LOUISE WOOSTER

April 6

5:00 p.m.

$8 Members | $10 Non-members

This show, commissioned by Vulcan® Park and Museum, was a huge hit at the inaugural performance during the 2015 Birmingham Revealed cultural series. Vulcan® Park and Museum and the UAB School of Public Health will once again partner to bring the one-woman drama back during National Public Health Week.

Birmingham “madam” and humanitarian Louise Wooster lived a life unimaginable, complete with tragedy, comedy and her infamous dalliance with John Wilkes Booth. Referencing Birmingham’s rough and tumble early days, this one-woman show presents Wooster as she promotes herself, leaving the audience to decide what was fact, fiction or fantasy. Join playwright and actress Ellise Mayor in this production, drawn from archival research and Wooster’s, The Autobiography of a Magdalen.

FROM THE CHAIRMAN

Vulcan® Park and Museum Annual Report FY 2014-2015

When Vulcan Park Foundation reopened Vulcan® Park and Museum in 2004, one comprehensive mission was crafted to lay the groundwork for the future of the organization and to pave the way for its enormous potential:

To preserve and promote Vulcan as the symbol for the Birmingham region, to advance knowledge and understanding of Birmingham's history and culture, and to encourage exploration of the region.

Vulcan® Park and Museum continually seeks new ways to bring this mission to life to enrich the lives of the tens of thousands of annual visitors – not to mention the lives of the citizens who experience Vulcan in some way, every day. In fiscal 2015, new programs were created while long-time favorites were embraced by new audiences.

The fall of 2014 saw tremendous success with the creation of The Vulcans Community Awards recognition program. This mission-driven fundraiser recognizes citizens from the Birmingham region who exemplify pride, leadership and progress, just as Vulcan has symbolized for 111 years. In its inaugural year, nearly 200 individuals were nominated and 13 recipients were honored for their contributions to the betterment of life in our community.

A partnership with the Italian American Heritage Society allowed us to bring La Storia: Birmingham's Italian Community to the Linn-Henley Gallery. This fascinating exhibit, dedicated to preserving and sharing the stories of the people who added to the rich fabric of our unique community, allowed guests to appreciate where we came from, recognize our progress, and appreciate our potential.

Living Legends, a new annual program created in partnership with Bright House Networks, gave students the opportunity to interact and learn from community leader Dr. Richard Arrington, Jr. During this forum, presented in recognition of Black History Month, students were inspired by the challenges Dr. Arrington overcame during his terms in office.

The final aspect of our mission is now being upheld in a new, exciting, and creatively artistic way. Vulcans on Parade, the brainchild of five young professionals in our community, takes Vulcan from his pedestal and strategically places him in the community for all to see! Human-scale replicas of Vulcan, painted by local artists to showcase our area's many cultural institutions, encourage exploration of our region. Be on the lookout for more Vulcans on Parade in the coming year!

As Vulcan® Park and Museum celebrates the successes of 2015 and looks forward to an exciting 2016, we invite you to take an active role. Invest in future generations by visiting, volunteering and supporting our programs and exhibitions. Since Vulcan® Park and Museum is a nonprofit organization, your gifts and memberships are needed to continue to expand our renown and new educational programs and community events.

Join us in making sure that the colossal icon of our citizens' determined spirit is not just preserved but thrives for another 111 years.

Sincerely,

ENHANCING THE VISITOR EXPERIENCE

For 12 years now, Vulcan® Park and Museum has been a great experience for the Birmingham community as well as for the thousands of visitors we welcome annually. The City of Birmingham will soon embark on several renovation projects throughout the park that will enhance the total “Vulcan” experience. In addition to a few smaller projects, the gift shop inside Vulcan Center will be given a much-needed facelift and expansion. This new gift shop, triple the size of the current, will offer a larger selection of Vulcan souvenir items as well as locally made gifts.

“We see so many visitors from out of town who want to take something home with them that represents their visit to our area,” said Darlene Negrotto, President and CEO. “With a bigger gift shop, we plan to expand the line of local merchandise to better serve those visitors and enhance their overall experience.”

Appropriately, the new shop will be donned “The Anvil: Gifts Forged in Alabama, Loved Everywhere.” We’re excited to see this construction project take place over the next several months while we aim to meet more than our visitors’ expectations.

A GIANT IMPACT

It is rare to find an individual who, like Vulcan, acts as a beacon of the community and is a symbol of Birmingham and all its good works. Philip Morris, expert in civic design, is one of these individuals. If you know Philip, you know that his passion for Birmingham is evident in his life's works.

After a 31-year editorial career with Southern Living magazine, Philip channeled his talents into the historical preservation of Alabama's most beloved landmarks. He is a past board member of the American Architectural Foundation and received the Alabama Humanities Award in 1994. Philip acted as a co-chair during the Vulcan statue restoration in the early 2000's and was instrumental in the planning and redesign of the park.

With an eye for architecture, he used his knowledge of existing national park layouts to conceptualize a design that seamlessly blended the existing infrastructure with the new event center and museum. He wanted everything to look authentic to the area, and his efforts have resulted into the park we love today.

He is often credited as a "mover and shaker" in Birmingham's renaissance and the revitalization of the downtown district. In addition to his work at Vulcan® Park & Museum, he was an active member of the planning committees for Railroad Park, Red Mountain Park and Linn Park. Philip authored the book, Vulcan & His Times, which details Vulcan's origins; he is also credited as the mastermind and curator behind Vulcan® Park & Museum's Spring Walking Tour series.

Philip was honored in November at a party celebrating his impact on the park and Vulcan Park Foundation. A plaque will be displayed on the City Overlook at Vulcan® Park & Museum, illustrating that his good deeds extend far beyond the perimeters of the park. We want to say "thank you" to Philip for his dedication to the park and the city of Birmingham. Because of his labors, generations of park patrons can enjoy Vulcan – and that is truly a giant impact!
